At any time prior to the deadline for submission of proposals, UNWOMEN may, for any reason, whether at its own initiative or in response to a clarification requested by a prospective proponent, modify the CFP documents by amendment. All prospective proponents that have received the CFP documents will be notified in writing of all amendments to the CFP documents. All amendments will also be posted on the advertised source.

Section 4: UN Women Terms of Reference

1. Introduction

UN Women Jordan Country Office engaged in extensive consultations during 2017 to develop a new strategic programme of support to the Government of Jordan for the period 2018-2022. This programme focuses on supporting Jordan's efforts to continue to respond to the humanitarian crisis in the region while strengthening its own resilience, stability and security. Framed within the global policy context of the 2030 Agenda and the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and the central promise in Jordan's national planning documents to leave no one behind, in particular vulnerable women and youth, the programme clearly draws the links between women's empowerment, sustainable development and Jordan's security and stability.

UN Women's strategic programme applies a "resilience and empowerment" approach, designed to build the short and medium-term resilience of vulnerable refugee and Jordanian women, while also promoting the long term enabling environment for their empowerment. The programme will achieve this through three key areas of work: policy development and global norms; women's economic empowerment; and women's voices in peace, security and humanitarian action.

Policy development and global norms

Important advances for women's human rights have been made in Jordan in recent years. Amendments to the Social Security Act (2019) have enhanced protection for women, particularly small business owners; amendments to the Labour Law addressed workplace childcare facilities for children of working parents and equal pay for work of equal value; a Strategy to Promote Women's Political Participation in All Elected Bodies (2012) has been adopted; and there is a National Strategy to Combat Violence Against Women (2014). In addition, a landmark parliamentary decision in August 2017 adopted a package of amendments to the Penal Code which included the abrogation of Article 308, which had exonerated rapists if they married their victims.

Yet challenges remain. While out-performing most of its neighbours in the region in all global indexes, Jordan currently ranks 138 of 149 countries in the Global Gender Gap Index (2018), and serious gaps in implementation of international gender equality commitments remain such as the Constitution's lack of explicit prohibition of discrimination based on sex, the State's reservations on CEDAW Articles 9 (nationality rights) and 16 (rights in marriage) that have a negative impact on women's substantive enjoyment of their rights.

UN Women will promote policy development and implementation of global norms by supporting national stakeholders to review and revise legal frameworks; promote women's leadership and civic engagement; challenge harmful social norms and practices through community mobilization and action; and improve data collection and analysis on SDG gender related indicators and key policy issues.

Women's Economic Empowerment

Promoting economic growth is one of Jordan's key strategies to building resilience and maintaining security and stability. However, both the government and the international community have recognized that given Jordan's low female labour force participation rate (at 14 per cent one of the lowest globally, and lowest of a country not in conflict) this economic growth will not happen if Jordan is not able to bring women into the economy as contributors towards GDP growth.

Despite high levels of education and achievement amongst women, major constraints remain on their productive participation in the economic sphere. Four main obstacles to women's economic empowerment include social norms related to gender roles and appropriate work; lack of affordable and quality childcare; lack of safe and reliable transport; and poor working conditions, including a lack of prevention and redressal services to sexual harassment in the workplace. A number of pieces of recent research have reaffirmed that both men and women in Jordan hold beliefs that it is inappropriate for women to work in mixed sex environments. Even among women and men who do believe that women should be able to work in any job they want; a large proportion still believe that the responsibility of the home remains with women regardless of them being engaged in productive work or not. Social norms on women's productive and reproductive roles are a major barrier to women seeking livelihood and employment opportunities.

Segregation of occupations by gender, due to social norms on "appropriate" employment sectors for women, results in young women choosing education paths tailored to public sector employment (for example education and health). If public sector employment opportunities are unavailable, educated women prefer to stay out of the labour force, for reasons linked to the obstacles mentioned above, such as social pressure from family and community and wage levels not justifying the costs of childcare and transportation. Less educated women, due to household economic imperatives, are more likely to accept low skilled and low paid employment in poor working conditions. These women are also more likely to experience exploitation and harassment in the workplace.

UN Women will address these challenges through a number of strategies: facilitate evidence-based policy dialogue on the impact of investments on barriers to women's employment for economic growth; support social mobilization and advocacy on key challenges to women's labour force participation, particularly harmful social norms; provide integrated policy advice and technical assistance to government on legislation, policies and strategies for women's improved access to income security and decent work; and support innovative partnerships and platforms with private sector, civil society and government for delivering trainings for women in non-traditional technical and vocational sectors, as well as building their entrepreneurship skills.

Women's voices in peace, security and humanitarian action

As a country with two major conflicts on its borders; a large refugee population; increasing concerns related to violent extremism; low participation of women in the security sector; and limited policy dialogue on security issues, the women, peace and security (WPS) agenda is a key policy framework for supporting Jordan's security. Global evidence shows that the WPS agenda improves the operational effectiveness of responses to security concerns and ensures women's human rights issues in crisis contexts are addressed. Given the instrumentalization of gendered narratives by violent extremist groups who are placing the control and subjugation of women and girls at the heart of their agendas, the WPS agenda is also well placed to inform and lead a prevention of violence extremism response. UN Women will support the government to implement the commitments in the JONAP 1325 as well as to integrate a gender perspective in the prevention of violence extremism, gender responsive security sector reform, improve access to justice particularly for women and girl's victims of violence and building civil society initiatives for peace and security.

UN Women Jordan developed over the past years a unique model to respond to the urgent needs of Syrian refugee women and girls in camp settings in Jordan: the Oasis empowerment centers. Under the programme UN Women has built on the Oasis model and expanded it to host communities to provide support to Syrian refugee women as well as vulnerable Jordanian women. UN Women will also increase its technical and functional capacity on coordination support to humanitarian partners to ensure the wider Syria Crisis response by the international community.

In line with UN Women's approach to the humanitarian - resilience – sustainable development nexus, UN Women Jordan is implementing a unique model to respond to the urgent needs of vulnerable Syrian refugee and Jordanian women and girls in camp settings and host communities in Jordan. This model, the Oasis center provides services in a holistic manner designed to empower vulnerable women in their personal lives and household dynamics; improve their self-esteem and dignity; translate into sustainable job placements and income generation; reduce their experiences of violence; and engage them in their communities. The Oasis center provides three integrated lines of services to women meeting vulnerability criteria, both Syrian refugee and Jordanian: 1) supporting economic empowerment through cash for work opportunities, technical and vocational training, educational opportunities, entrepreneurship skills and job placement, 2) providing protection, prevention, referrals, and awareness-raising on gender based violence, and 3) encouraging leadership and participation through civic engagement opportunities.

2. Description of required services/results

Outcome 1.1 Jordanian government and civil society assess progress on implementation of normative and policy frameworks on gender equality and the empowerment of women and girls.

Monitoring and Evaluation Plan (max. 1 page)

This section should contain an explanation of the plan for monitoring and evaluating the activities, both during its implementation (formative) and at completion (summative). Key elements to be included are:

- How the performance of the activities will be tracked in terms of achievement of the steps and milestones set forth in the Implementation Plan, what are the tools that will be used, and by whom the tracking and monitoring will be conducted.
- How any mid-course correction and adjustment of the design and plans will be facilitated on the basis of feedback received

- How the participation of community members in the monitoring and evaluation processes will be achieved

Communications Plan (max. 1 page)

This section should contain an explanation of communication and outreach activities during the course of implementation, and the final products or deliverables to be submitted by completion. In line with programmatic interventions, the plan should identify clear communication objectives, target audiences, media channels and communication products to sustain the visibility of interventions and priority areas of advocacy. Key elements to be included are:

- Information on activities and outreach products linked to the technical approach, including events, impact stories, audio-visual products, news articles and press releases, social media and any other materials planned.
- Information on the indicative timeframe of communication activities, target audiences, media tools.
- In case of any budgetary implication, relevant costs must be included within the budget and mentioned in the communications plan.

Component 5: Risks to Successful Implementation (1 page)

Identify and list any major risk factors that could result in the activities not producing the expected results. These should include both internal factors (for example, the technology involved fails to work as projected) and external factors (for example, significant currency fluctuations resulting into changes in the economics of the activity). Describe how such risks are to be mitigated.

Include in this section also the key assumptions on which the activity plan is based on. In this case, the assumptions are mostly related to external factors (for example, government environmental policy remaining stable) which are anticipated in planning, and on which the feasibility of the activities depend

Component 6: Results-Based Budget (max. 1.5 pages)

The development and management of a realistic budget is an important part of developing and implementing successful activities. Careful attention to issues of financial management and integrity will enhance the effectiveness and impact. The following important principles should be kept in mind in preparing a project budget:

- Include only costs which directly relate to efficiently carrying out the activities and producing the results which are set forth in the proposal. Other associated costs should be funded from other sources.

- The budget should be realistic. Find out what planned activities will actually cost, and do not assume that you will be able to make do for less.
- The budget should include all costs associated with managing and administering the activity. Particularly include the cost of monitoring and evaluation.
- Indirect costs, or administrative overhead costs, such as staff salaries and office rent are not funded. These therefore should not be part of the funding request.
- The budget line items are general categories intended to assist in thinking through where money will be spent. If a planned expenditure does not appear to fit in any of the standard line item categories, list the item under other costs, and state what the money is to be used for.
- The figures contained in the Budget Sheet should agree with those on the proposal header and text.
