

Section II: Schedule of Requirements

Sourcing Reference: RFQ/2021/23842

Tender Title: Provision of Event Management Support for the UNOCT/UNCCT Capacity Building Trainings on PCVE in Khartoum, Sudan.

1. Introduction

The United Nations Office of Counter-Terrorism/Counter-Terrorism Centre (UNOCT/UNCCT) project on Preventing Violent Extremism (PVE) through Strategic Communications as part of the Global Programme on Preventing Countering Violence Extremism (PCVE) seeks to strengthen the capacity of Member States, civil society, UN entities, and regional organisations to use strategic communications as a PVE intervention, specifically to prevent the appeal of terrorism.

The project offers training and capacity-building assistance to requesting entities in the area of strategic communications for PVE. The PVE through Strategic Communications project is implemented through three main lines of support, which include:

1. The delivery of introductory training on strategic communications for PVE which covers the strategic communications process, digital media, and campaigns basics using practical examples, with a particular focus on countering hate speech;
2. Advisory support to strengthen inter-agency coordination, coherence, and oversight of strategic communications; and
3. Technical advisory tailored to the specific needs of the beneficiary, which may include training in the areas of target audience analysis, development of cohesive narratives, campaign design, and impact assessment.

Following bi-lateral meetings between UNOCT/UNCCT and UNITAMS Khartoum Office discussing the needs and gaps, UNOCT/UNCCT proposes a three-phase service offer to be implemented over a 12-month period. Phases 1 and 1.5 will primarily focus on delivering Strategic Communications capacity building to multiple stakeholders and beneficiaries. In addition, it will act as a scoping co-design process to plan for Phases 2 and 3, bilaterally with UNITAMS, which will seek to integrate a wider range of portfolios from the UNCCT Global PCVE Programme, found in the appendix below.

2. Background

The importance of the proposed strategic communication activities is contextualised against the increasing influence of the internet as the second most common channel of exposure to violent extremist ideas in Sudan, surpassed only by “friend networks”.<sup>1</sup> In turn, the deployment of PCVE strategic communications in Sudan becomes more pertinent when considering the primary reason for Sudanese violent extremists to both join and remain in a violent extremist organisation is ideological<sup>2</sup>, stressing the need for effective support in building PCVE counter-narrative capacities amongst local communicators such as journalists, government officials and young people who increasingly are engaged in civil society led PCVE initiatives.

Building on this evidence base, engagement with young people remains a high priority. With the vast majority of radicalised and recruited Sudanese who end up joining VEOs are young Sudanese in their twenties and with at least an undergraduate degree<sup>3</sup>, engaging with young people cross-regionally and within university campuses to conduct needs assessments and co-design tailored interventions becomes an increasingly pertinent activity. Approaching this engagement through a gender sensitive lens is additionally crucial especially when considering that in some regions, 100% of women who joined VEOs were university students when recruited.<sup>4</sup>

Further to the above, Sudan is working substantially on its transition to democracy, with the support of the United Nations Integrated Transition Assistance Mission in Sudan (UNITAMS).

While all eyes are on the economic crisis and the political process leading to the elections, little attention is given to the spread of hate speech and its impact on the stability and future of the country. Hate speech in Sudan is no longer limited to areas of conflict, but has expanded across the whole country. It complicates the political transition, disrupts economic development, threatens Sudan's social fabric and ultimately contributes to the proliferation of violent extremism.

It manifests itself across Sudanese society affecting communities across all social strata. It is fuelled by several elements that include regionalism, tribalism, racism and religious conflict. There is now an urgent need to stop the spread of hate speech, mitigate its impact and create better conditions by which Sudan can tackle its other urgent priorities.

Considering the prevalence of hate speech in Sudan, the media can play a lead role in the fight against it, strengthening the mechanisms to combat it, promoting the language of peace, renouncing racism and promoting social integration.

Hence, this is an important project that aims at developing the capacities of media officers in various regions, especially those suffering from armed conflict, and those that are likely to witness an escalation of violence due to the spread of hate speech.
